```
» allow_unauthenticated_access only: %i[ new create ]
```

With the authorization logic in place, we can navigate to http://localhost:3000/ without requiring a login. But if we navigate to http://localhost:3000/products, we're redirected to the login screen instead.

We show our customer the results of our efforts and are rewarded with a big smile and a request: could we add a sidebar and put links to the user and product administration stuff in it? You betcha!