The short answer is no. In fact, many Rails applications are for a small or homogeneous group and never need translating. That being said, pretty much everybody who does find that they need translation agrees that it’s best if this is done early. So unless you’re sure that translation won’t ever be needed, it’s our recommendation that you at least understand what would be involved so that you can make informed decisions.