The format is YAML, the same as the one used to configure the databases. YAML consists of indented names and values, where the indentation in this case matches the structure that we created in our names.

To get Rails to recognize new YAML files, the server needs to be restarted.

Navigating to http://localhost:3000/es now will show some translated text, as shown in the following screenshot.

Next to be updated is the main title as well as the Add to Cart button. The first can be found in the store index template:
