so contradictory to one another that I found it difficult to get at the core of them. But I would like him to explain some time or other as to what should be the attitude of Government on matters so vital to the interests of the people of India. If he says as the head of the Government that he is prepared to allow any viewpoint to be circulated within the country – and that is what we understand by democratic freedom – so long as it does not advocate chaos, I would be at one with him. If he says that because he does not like that anybody should speak about the annulment of the partition he means to prevent us and therefore wants to put these words in the Constitution and later pass some law consistent with them, then I say it is most arbitrary and if done, will lead to very serious consequences. I do not know what will happen in future. I am not necessarily thinking in terms of war. I am hoping – it may be a hope which may not be achieved in my lifetime – that this terrible mistake, which we made in partitioning the country trying to get something which we thought we were getting but which we actually did not, has to be remedied, not in communal interests but in the interests of both the Hindus and Muslims and everyone else. We have got to realize that apart from the communal aspect of it, economically, strategically, nationally and internationally we have been rendered weak and severely hit by British diplomacy. I hope that someday people will realize that this mistake will have to be rectified by the good sense of the people of both the countries.

Pandit Krishna Chandra Sharma: Were you sleeping when the country was partitioned? Why did you not revolt then?

Dr S.P. Mookerjee: I am at least revolting today, and will you also have the good sense to revolt with me?

Mr Chairman: May I appeal to honourable Members to be very calm. Everyone will have his chance to say what he likes.

Dr S.P. Mookerjee: The point that I would like to urge before the Prime Minister is that this provision is totally unnecessary. People are saying that this is being done to placate or appease Pakistan. But how long can this go
