but on the battlefield of America. Freedom developed in that country not by passing laws, or by the decrees of the President, because the ultimate sanction rested with the people. We have also to reckon with the people in this country. We have drawn up the Constitution with a declared desire to protect the mighty rights and interests of the people, millions of them who are downtrodden and have not the courage to speak out. But as the Prime Minister knows, even in their hearts a new awakening has come. As we move about from place to place, we can see the signs of that reawakening, which we could not have dreamt could happen so quickly.

Now, let us take the fullest advantage of that reawakening in the larger interests of this country. Let us not try to arm the executive with wider and larger powers being afraid of a Frankenstein's monster that is supposed to have raised its head in India. There may be elements in this country with mischievous intentions. But the larger section of the population of the country is well mannered and they are anxious that this country should go ahead peacefully. Therefore, their hearts being sound, we have to approach them in the proper way. We have to tackle the great problems of administration in social and economic spheres specially so as to earn their spontaneous confidence.

Talking about the Supreme Court, the Prime Minister said that while conventions may arise even in this country – I hope they will – that will take a generation, and how can you wait for a generation? Therefore, what is the remedy? Do not create healthy conventions? Let the executive decide what is to be done; let it be armed with new and arbitrary powers; and even that slow attempt at making new conventions you want to crush. Is that the way you want to preserve the sanctity and sacredness of the Constitution which is your own handiwork? Now look at this – I am reading from Beck's The Constitution of the United States. This is how it reads:

> This great power to curb legislatures and executives, and therefore majorities, by resort to the paramount will of a written Constitution, has been exerted for over 10 years, and while not infrequently the party whose power is thus curbed has vented its wrath and disappointment upon the Supreme Court, yet after the thunder of
