Soon, a policewoman (sub-inspector Anusuya) began speaking to Dhanu. She and Dhanu were worried. What if they were caught? Yes, Sivarasan was carrying a gun as the lone backup person, but Dhanu getting caught would fail the mission completely. Even if she managed to detonate the bomb instead of getting caught with it, the target (Rajiv Gandhi) would escape. And it could take Sivarasan's life instead. That would be a disgrace to Prabhakaran's fight against New Delhi.

Nalini, standing at a distance, did not know what the policewoman was telling Dhanu. But from the policewoman's hand gestures, it seemed that she was asking Dhanu to leave the place. At that point, Haribabu intervened, and the policewoman told him to leave as well. Both Dhanu and Haribabu left the spot. Sivarasan was still around. The policewoman also left, as Rajiv Gandhi had just arrived. Many people were heading in the direction where Rajiv was coming from. Dhanu and Haribabu took the opportunity to go back to their earlier positions. Nalini and Shubha heaved a sigh of relief. When Rajiv Gandhi came near Dhanu, she motioned to Sivarasan to move away—she must have pressed the first toggle switch to activate the bomb's system.

Nalini stopped speaking. She seemed to have been overcome by emotion, by the 'sacrifice and dedication' of Dhanu. Kanth noticed a fire in her eyes. He certainly didn't want to give Nalini a break at this juncture. He screamed at Nalini to speak. She turned to him with the same fire in her eyes and resumed talking.

Nalini said that a girl (Kokila) was reading something to Rajiv. Dhanu was standing very close to her. The policewoman (Anusuya) again tried to push Dhanu away, but Dhanu didn't budge, and as soon as the girl finished reading, put the garland around Rajiv's neck. Then Dhanu bent down.

Nalini stopped again. Kanth urged her to continue. She looked straight into his eyes and said, 'Then there was an explosion and Dhanu became a martyr.' She didn't say 'Dhanu "killed" Rajiv'. Kanth insisted that she admit to the word 'killed', but Nalini remained defiant. Silent. Kanth lost his cool and shouted at Nalini and asked if she wanted the company of Captain Ravindran again. At that, Murugan turned furious and threatened
