column in Vikatan, where he rubbished India Today's 'inside story of the Rajiv assassination' and called for the boycott of the writer of the story in question. Editors at India Today advised Anirudhya to ignore what the DMK supremo had to say. Politicians had compulsions to speak, they said. Karunanidhi eventually would do no harm. Badhwar asked Anirudhya to get ready for his next trip to Madras and dig up more on the DMK's stand on the LTTE. The party was maintaining a premeditated silence on its links with the Tamil Tigers, but history would throw light on their relationship of convenience. The matter was highlighted later in 2005 when the Jain Inquiry Commission, set up to investigate the larger conspiracy behind Rajiv Gandhi's assassination, released its findings. It said inter alia that the party had openly encouraged various activities of the LTTE even after Rajiv Gandhi signed the peace accord with the Sri Lankan government. While Prabhakaran had openly shared his opposition to the accord, Jaffna sent fillers to Karunanidhi seeking his support. However, the author of this book could not find any record of Karunanidhi's response to the emissaries.[2]

India Today broke a story on the indictment of the party, quoting from the findings of the Jain Commission report. Prabhu Chawla wrote:

> The LTTE was getting its supplies, including arms, ammunition, explosives, fuel and other essential items for its war against the IPKF from Tamil Nadu. That too with the support of the Tamil Nadu government and the connivance of the law enforcement authorities. Antagonism was evident between the DMK government in Tamil Nadu and the Rajiv Gandhi government at the Centre.[3]

But it was also true that the Jayalalithaa government, which had returned to power with a landslide victory in the assembly election post the assassination, was trying to pressurize the SIT to implicate the DMK and the DK in the case. A senior bureaucrat from the state secretariat had asked Kaarthikeyan when he was going to arrest Karunanidhi for insinuating the LTTE to kill Rajiv. Whatever might have been the source of the
