On the night of 15 May, Santhan met a top LTTE leader, Kanthan, and handed him a letter from Sivarasan. Kanthan gave him five lakh rupees, which might be required by Sivarasan from time to time. Santhan was asked to keep it safe. Next day, Sivarasan went to pick up twenty thousand in cash from Santhan. He told him about Prabhakaran's increasing confidence in the boy, particularly after the killing of Padmanabha. Sivarasan told him about the purpose behind getting human bombs such as Shubha and Dhanu—and that's when Santhan heard about the LTTE's plan to assassinate Rajiv Gandhi for the first time.

Santhan met Sivarasan regularly thereafter. Sivarasan had to collect cash in instalments, and the operation started unfolding before Santhan. On the morning of 21 May, Santhan witnessed Sivarasan preparing himself for the final execution. He was facing a mirror and checking if his pistol, concealed beneath his kurta pyjama, could be seen from the outside. He had taken Santhan's observation on that too. Santhan assured him that the pistol was not visible. This was right before Sivarasan went to the Kodungaiyur house to pick up Dhanu and Shubha a little after noon.

That night, after returning from Sriperumbudur, Sivarasan told him that Rajiv Gandhi was dead. And that Haribabu, too, had died in the blast. Thereafter, Santhan kept moving from place to place until he got settled at the Sundara Lodge. Sivarasan met him there to discuss his next move. Santhan noticed his boss had shaved off his moustache. Sivarasan told him that Murugan was going to look after Sivarasan's work in India and that Santhan should extend to him all the support he needed. Santhan, as per earlier instructions, handed over twenty-five thousand in cash to him and three bus tickets for Coimbatore, purchased under fictitious names. Before leaving, Sivarasan told him about his plan to murder a person named Chandrahasan—Santhan had to coordinate with Murugan to execute the job. The murder was being planned to divert the attention of the CBI from the assassination.

Verma had a feeling that Santhan was applying the same strategy now to divert their attention from Sivarasan. He was put through a gruelling interrogation. But he claimed he knew nothing more about Sivarasan's
