gang must have been in the city. And with that came the million-dollar question on everybody's mind—how did Sivarasan reach Bangalore, slipping past so many barricades, police pickets and a distance of about 350 km between Madras and Bangalore. His confidence must have escalated with every slip he gave to the security agencies, who he knew were desperately looking for him.