details of the others but got nothing about their whereabouts. All the cadres had been told to fend for themselves. The local police were alerted, but not a single character was found from the list.

Miresh had also talked about three female LTTE cadres in the Indira Nagar house while about six male cadres were being treated at a local nursing home. Acting on the sketchy description of the facility, the local police launched a series of raids. But everyone from the Indira Nagar house had vanished.

Kulathan and Arsalan were the only injured cadres who had come to Tamil Nadu for medical treatment. Why did they die by suicide? Miresh and senior activist Jagannathan, who were in custody, estimated that Trichy Santhan had given clear instructions to everyone to not get caught alive. They had to bite the cyanide capsule in the event of a police raid and that they should never forget the sacrifice Dhanu had made to make Prabhakaran's mission a success. They must follow suit. But the LTTE boys who were looking for a cover in the city could not have revealed much to the SIT even if they were captured alive, except that Sivarasan, Shubha and Nero were part of the LTTE and that they had been shifted to the nearby Domalur hideout from the Coimbatore hideout, where Dixon and Guna had died by suicide on 28 July. The LTTE's involvement in the assassination would have been established beyond any doubt, which is why Trichy Santhan's order to bite the cyanide pills.[8]

The tracking team was back to square one with no further leads. All it was left with was that the LTTE cadres were still around and getting medical treatment at various hideouts. The state police of Karnataka had sealed the borders with Tamil Nadu and a large number of police check posts were set up on the periphery of Bangalore. But One-Eyed Jack was getting more and more alert with every failed attempt by the SIT to catch him. The question, therefore, in the minds of every member of the tracking team was: Would Sivarasan continue to avail shelter provided by Trichy Santhan and his assistant Suresh Master? Most likely not. Nevertheless, Sri Kumar asked the Bangalore Police to discreetly check any new Tamil arrivals. He also shared the details of the two cars used by Santhan's group
