During the interrogation, she openly abused Rajiv and compared the SIT investigators with the IPKF, calling them ‘butchers of innocent Tamils’. She became an easy recruit in the assassination team; she even started working on a book titled Satanic Forces and subtitled ‘Heinous Crimes of the Indian Peace Keeping Force’ at her brother Bhagyanathan’s printing press.

Brainwashed by both Murugan and her brother Bhagyanathan, Nalini did not join the LTTE but provided all possible support to the assassins. A graduate in English from Madras University, Nalini shifted from hideout to hideout to keep the two human bombs—Dhanu and the backup Shubha—safe. She took them around on weekends and attended sessions held by Sivarasan discussing the plan. She studied LTTE literature spewing venom against the IPKF, and Rajiv Gandhi in particular, holding him responsible for the ‘massacre of innocent Tamils in Jaffna’. She took Dhanu and Shubha to a garment store to purchase the salwar kameez that they would wear on the night of the assassination.

Nalini showed no sign of nervousness after the assassination and attended office work normally until two cops landed at her workplace and inquired about why a member of the LTTE would have her telephone number on his person. Feigning ignorance, she dealt with the cops smartly and never returned to office after that. She is the lone survivor of the assassins who had visited Sriperumbudur on that fateful night. But she did not talk for sixty hours after her dramatic arrest from the Saidapet bus terminus in Madras.

Her death sentence was upheld by the Supreme Court in May 1999. However, on appeal, it was commuted to life term by the apex court later.
