argument was that the LTTE's official spokesperson, Anton Rajah, had offered the group's condolences saying the LTTE was 'shocked' by the tragedy. Chandra Shekhar could not understand why the spokesperson of a terrorist organization had to be believed. Bajpai cited that terrorist organizations owning responsibility for attacks was nothing new. The PM didn't interrupt him. The R&AW chief also said that the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front (JKLF) chairman Amanullah Khan had issued a statement from Rawalpindi, Pakistan, denying its involvement; so had the Sikh militant leader Jagjit Singh Chohan from London.

The R&AW, therefore, didn't believe there was a 'foreign hand' in the assassination. Bajpai also expressed his disapproval of the CBI's arrival on foreign soil—Colombo—without the knowledge of the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) and R&AW. Bajpai advised the PM that the serious matter of lapse in internal security that had led to the tragedy had to be investigated. The Verma Commission had already been formed for that very purpose. But Bajpai reportedly tried to push his theory of 'internal sabotage'. Seeing the PM not paying much attention to his claims, Bajpai claimed that a top leader of the LTTE was a R&AW mole. Instantly the PM wanted to know who it was. The reply came after a pause. The 'mole' was Kittu. The PM was surprised. Because the assassination had taken place despite a key member of the terrorist organization being a R&AW mole. There was silence in the room.

Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar was a shrewd politician with more than five decades in the political game, including seven terms in the Parliament. He had earned the top job with the support of just fifty-four Members of Parliament (MPs) against the requirement of 273. Rajiv's party was lending him support from the outside. He had already called the director of the IB (DIB), M.K. Narayanan, and CBI Director Vijay Karan for a meeting and pitted them against Bajpai's claim of 'internal sabotage'. While Bajpai was responsible for gathering 'foreign' intelligence, Narayanan did the same for 'domestic' intelligence. Chandra Shekhar wanted to assess the level of the blame game among the security agencies.
