My Perspective

As report cards go, the demonetization Report Card is an important one.

Notwithstanding numerous claims of success by various ministers and bureaucrats, factual data shows that the Modi government failed to achieve any of the eight major stated objectives of demonetization.

The 2016 demonetization was not just a complete failure, but given the crippling economic costs and the debilitating human impact of the move, also an unmitigated disaster.

Hopefully, this report card will give future governments pause to reflect on the policy measures that can and should be taken to achieve important objectives such as tackling black money, corruption, and counterfeiting, as also on measures that they should not take.

To paraphrase the words of former Governor of the RBI I.G. Patel 'We should beware of gestures that produce much work, great pain, and little gain.'[51]
