RBI, as the custodian of the Indian currency, had failed to ensure the country's monetary stability.

The PAC raised 10 very simple questions.[4]

1. Union Minister Piyush Goyal has said on the floor of the House that the decision to demonetize was taken by the RBI and its Board. The government merely acted upon this advice. Do you concur?
2. If the decision was indeed RBI's, then when exactly did the RBI decide that it was in India's best interests to demonetize currency?
3. What was the exact rationale laid out by the RBI for this decision to invalidate ₹500 and ₹1,000 notes overnight?
4. RBI's own estimates show fake/counterfeit currency to be a mere ₹500 crore. India's cash to GDP was 12 per cent, lower than that of Japan (18 per cent) and Switzerland (13 per cent). High denomination notes as a share of currency was 86 per cent in India, but 90 per cent in China and 81 per cent in the US. So, what was so alarming that the RBI decided India needed to demonetize suddenly?
5. When was the notice sent to the RBI board members calling for an emergency meeting on 8 November? Which of them attended this meeting? How long did the meeting last? And where are the minutes of this meeting?
6. In the subsequent note sent to the Cabinet recommending demonetization, did the RBI explicitly mention that this decision would mean invalidating 86 per cent of the country's currency and its attendant cost? How long did the RBI say it would take to remonetize?
7. The RBI notification of 8 November 2016 under Section 3 c(v) issued a restriction on withdrawal from a bank account over the counter to ₹10,000 per day and ₹20,000 per week. There was a similar limit of ₹2,000 per day in an ATM. Under what law and powers of the RBI were these limitations imposed on people to
