Amendment Act, 1976. However, the House was dissolved on 18 January 1977, after having been in existence for a period of five years, 10 months and six days.

[6]A minister in the Union or state government is not considered as holding the office of profit. Also, the Parliament can declare that a particular office of profit will not disqualify its holder from parliamentary membership.

[7]Kihoto Hollohan vs. Zachillhu (1992).

[8]According to the Prohibition of Simultaneous Membership Rules (1950) made by the President.

[9]Vide the Finance Act, 2018. This Act amended the Salary, Allowances and Pension of Members of Parliament Act, 1954.

[9a]Section 3 of the Salaries and Allowances of Officers of Parliament Act, 1953 (as amended).

[9b]Section 5 of the Salaries and Allowances of Officers of Parliament Act, 1953 (as amended).

[10]Kihoto Hollohan vs. Zachillhu (1992).

[11]In this context, V.V. Giri observed: "The holder of an office provided with such extensive authority and power must discharge the duties of his/her office impartially. So impartiality is regarded as an indispensable condition of the office of the Speaker, who is the guardian of the powers and privileges of the House and not of the political party with whose support he/she might have been elected to the office. It is not possible for him/her to maintain order in the House unless he/she enjoys the confidence of the minority parties by safeguarding their rights and privileges". ('Powers of the Presiding Officers in Indian Legislature' in Journal of Consitutional and Parliamentary Studies, New Delhi, Vol II, No. 4, Oct-Dec. 1968, p. 22)

[12]For example, in the 13th Lok Sabha, Mr. Indrajit Gupta was appointed as Speaker Pro Tem on 20 - October 1999 and remained in that office till 22 October 1999 when the new Speaker, Mr. G.M.C. Balayogi was elected.

[12a]M.N. Kaul and S.L. Shakdher, Practice and Procedure of Parliament, Sixth Edition, 2009, Lok Sabha Secretariat, pp. 151–52.

[13]Under Article 107 (3) of the Constitution, a bill pending in Parliament shall not lapse by reason of the prorogation of the Houses.

Under Rule 336 of the Lok Sabha, a motion, resolution or an amendment, which has been moved and is pending in the House, shall not lapse by reason only of the prorogation of the House.

[13a]Under Rule 335 of the Lok Sabha, on the prorogation of the House, all pending notices, other than notices of intention to move for leave to introduce a Bill, shall lapse and fresh notices shall be given for the next session.

[13b]This information is adopted from the official website of the Lok Sabha (Digital Sansad).

[13c]M.N. Kaul and S.L. Shakdher, Practice and Procedure of Parliament, Sixth Edition, 2009, Lok Sabha Secretariat, pp. 454–55.