Articles 323A and 323B differ in the following three aspects:

1. While Article 323A contemplates establishment of tribunals for public service matters only, Article 323B contemplates establishment of tribunals for certain other matters (mentioned above).
2. While tribunals under Article 323A can be established only by Parliament, tribunals under Article 323B can be established both by Parliament and state legislatures with respect to matters falling within their legislative competence.
3. Under Article 323A, only one tribunal for the Centre and one for each state or two or more states may be established. There is no question of hierarchy of tribunals, whereas under Article 323B a hierarchy of tribunals may be created.

In the Chandra Kumar case[4] (1997), the Supreme Court declared those provisions of these two articles which excluded the jurisdiction of the high courts and the Supreme Court as unconstitutional. Hence, the judicial remedies are now available against the orders of these tribunals.
