maturity paper, say, three-year security to bring down the yield of the ten-year paper using lower short rates) were also tried.

However, in the face of great credit averseness of the banking system—especially PSBs—nothing worked.

The great liquidity infusion came to naught and RBI could not instil any stimuli or interest in the banking system to lend to ensure credit growth.