requirements for undertaking such projects. This has started happening and needs to be scaled up.

Fourth, all stressed real-estate projects should be put on an expeditious resolution path in the IBC process. Failed owners should be thrown out and replaced with good and established ones and lenders should take due haircuts. The resolved entities would then fast-track investment and complete projects. This will kickstart the stalled economy.

Such fundamental restructuring of the residential real-estate business would put the economy on a higher growth path again.
