Use the worksheet's name with a single quote regarding spaces or non-alphabetic characters (like @, #, !, -, etc.).

For example, to refer to cell A2 in a worksheet named Supply Data, the format is as follows:

='Supply Data'!A2

Note: Referring to a sheet in the same workbook and then renaming it won't break the reference. These references will be updated automatically by Excel.

Knowing the format of these references is excellent, but manually typing them isn't so great in practice. The process would be time-consuming and error-prone.
