

You can close the referenced Workbook, and your formula will remain intact. When you click on the affected cell(s), the formula bar will display the destination file and the formula.

Remember that when you create a reference to another workbook, the reference will always be an absolute reference, indicated by the $ sign before the row and column numbers.