

This means that if you copy and paste the formula containing the reference, it will always refer to the same range (it is absolute) rather than updating to a new range relative to the new location of the formula.

If you want the references to be relative rather than absolute, you must manually change them.