The VARIANCE function returns a decimal number representing the set's variance; 167.714

The VARIANCE function is useful for various statistical analyses, including identifying trends or patterns in data sets, comparing data sets, and predicting future outcomes based on previous data collected.