THE WORKSHEET

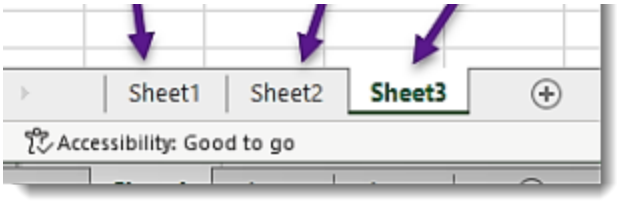

A workbook is made up of worksheets in Excel. The first sheet is named Sheet1 by default.

The plus (+) button creates an additional worksheet with a single click.

The more you click the plus (+) button, the more worksheet you create.

Each worksheet is independent of the other but shares the same file name. The older versions of Excel limit the number of worksheets inside a single workbook to 255. Recent versions of Excel restrict the number of worksheets
