GRIND LINES

In Excel, gridlines are the gray lines that run horizontally and vertically between cells on a worksheet. At the top, you have the header labeled alphabetically to define the columns.

You have the header labeled numerically at the side to define the rows.

The gridlines help differentiate cells and make it easy for users to move around the worksheet's columns and rows.