Greenpeace

Greenpeace is a non-governmental environmental Organisation with offices in over 39 countries and an international coordinating body in Amsterdam, the Netherlands Greenpeace was founded in 1971 by Irving Stowe and Dorothy Stowe, Canadian and US ex-pat environmental activists. Greenpeace states its goal is to "ensure the ability of the Earth to nurture life in all its diversity" and focuses its campaigning on worldwide issues such as climate change, deforestation, overfishing, commercial whaling, genetic engineering, and anti-nuclear issues. It uses direct action, lobbying, research, and ecotage to achieve its goals. The global Organisation does not accept funding from governments, corporations, or political parties, relying on three million individual supporters and foundation grants. Greenpeace has a general consultative status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council and is a founding member of the INGO Accountability Charter, an international non-governmental Organisation that intends to foster accountability and transparency of non-governmental Organisations. Greenpeace is known for its direct actions and has been described as the most visible environmental Organisation in the world.

Conclusion

International Organisations have become an increasingly common phenomenon in international life. The proliferation of international Organisations and treaty arrangements among states represents the formal expression of the extent to which international politics is becoming more and more institutionalized. In addition to the burgeoned scholarship on international Organisations, in the past decade, theories have been devoted to understanding why institutions exist, how they function, what are the effects they have on world politics have become increasingly refined and the empirical methods
