

With that, you're back to feature parity with the iOS app. To get tabs working on Android, you had to update the XML layout to account for multiple fragments, model the tabs, and dynamically wire up a `NavigatorConfiguration` instance for each tab.

With more Kotlin written, you're building your confidence in creating mobile apps across multiple platforms. Nice work!