markup, the Stimulus controller on the web, and the native component in the iOS app. The rest of the chapter will focus on customizing the component to do something more than adding a (useless!) button to the screen.