Distribute Builds to Testers

Just like for iOS, you'll create an email list of testers to invite to your app. Google Play has a concept of tracks—an app is promoted along these as the audience grows. The first track is internal testing,[71] which is limited to 100 testers but doesn't require any manual review from Google.

From the Google Play Console, navigate to Test and release → Testing → Internal testing. Select the Testers tab, and then click "Create email list."

Name the list "Internal Testers." Then, add your email to the second field and press ↩. Click the "Save changes" button in the bottom right to create the email list.