The great emperor grew weary of military life in his old age and stepped down from his role so that he could be succeeded by his son, Bindusara.