soldiers and officers. Among the Pakistanis killed, 215 were from Punjab, 49 from Sindh, 45 from Azad Kashmir and 19 from the NWFP. In all, 70 Muslims of Indian-held Kashmir were killed. The Tehreek received a setback when in 1999 its commander Abu Waseem Salafi was killed by Indian security forces. In February 2001, it received another blow when its leader Maulana Abdullah Ghazali was captured by Indian security forces. The Wahhabi Salafi warriors of Tehreek al-Mujahideen have made efforts to spread their faith in the valley by converting many Barelvi mosques in Poonch and Kupwara into Ahl-e-Hadith mosques.[46]

Because local belief in Sufism was so strong, the puritans represented by the Wahhabi Salafi followers took a back seat in the valley.[47] However, once Operation Topac was launched by the ISI in 1989, the puritans forced their way to prominence and pre-eminence.[48] The descent of a plethora of ISI-trained jihadi groups, flush from their victory over the Red Army in Afghanistan, hijacked the local sentiment for azadi and steered the struggle and manipulated it to fit into their rhetoric of a holy war demanding an Islamic caliphate and secession from India. The sinister process of 'fundamentalist indoctrination' is alive and underway in Wahhabi madrasas and schools in the valley today.[49] According to JKPF's Chairman Fayyaz Ahmad Bhatt, based on a district-wise count, there are nearly 7,000 Wahhabi mosques in the state.[50] Of these, 911 alone function in Srinagar and preach the orthodox Wahhabi brand of Islam. Nearly all funding for them come in through unofficial 'hawala channels'.[51] Admitting massive cash inflows to the valley, senior state intelligence officers reveal that the bulk of the illegal funds meant for Wahhabi groups[52] and other hardline factions are physically transferred across the LoC and at the border trading station in Uri, in the form of real and fake Indian currency notes, taking advantage of the barter trade being permitted between Jammu and Kashmir and POK. Checks by customs officers are at best cursory; there are no X-ray machines and other standard international border control equipment. The army merely observes the goings-on and does not interfere. The officers add that it is impossible to quantify the smuggled funds and that no
