prostrate with drink that only three men were at the gate.
5. Husayn surprised and captured Herat in the first go itself.

Babur

1. Babur was just a year due to turn twenty when he took over Samarkand (Husayn was thirty-two).
2. Babur had Shaybāni Khān as his opponent, who was of mature age and a witness of multiple warfare.
3. In the beginning, none came out of Samarkand to stand by Babur, though the hearts rested with him. The dread of Shaybāni Khān was the reason for it.
4. Babur's foe was in the fort and was driven off quite eloquently.
5. Babur had tried to get back to Samarkand once already but remained unsuccessful. It was the second time that he came and Allah brought it right! Samarkand was won.

By saying this, Babur certainly placed himself on a much higher pedestal than Husayn although he claims in the Baburnama that he had no desire to belittle the force of Husayn Mīrzā but to state the truth as it was.

Many chronograms of Babur's victory were composed by the poets of the day and region, but one piece of prose got deeply registered in his mind. It read, 'Know that its date is the Victory (Fath) of Babur Bahadur.' [*]

Having conquered Samarkand, Babur had begun to bring all nearby forts including, Shavdar, Soghd and the Tumans into an alliance. This was a phase of revolution towards goodness for Babur. Many Aūzbeg commanders had fled from those forts, fearing the worst consequences. Many were shown the way out by the inhabitants. In many forts, they were imprisoned by the people. The tide of the land was in favour of Babur with all might. People had stood with Babur wholeheartedly.

One can say that his fortune had begun to shine once again for Babur.

Shaybāni Khān with all his households and family despite arriving from Turkistan, went back skirting the Khwaja Didar and Ali-Abad as he had smelled the environment, which certainly won't have swayed in his favour. He set his way back to Bukhara.

It took around fifteen to sixteen weeks for Babur to get back all the nearby forts in his favour. Over and above this, Baqi Tarkhān helped occupy Qarshi, Khuzar and Qarshi and the Aūzbegs over there were crushed too.

Babur's fate was soaring.
