Shall lift to his teeth to the backhand of regret.[2]

In the Baburnama, he has narrated more reasons to justify his haste to fight. On the day of battle (that was to happen), the Great Bear constellation was between the two armies. Babur had particularly decided the day for the battle. This constellation of eight stars would have lain behind Babur's enemy for a couple of weeks if the fight had been deferred.

Perhaps there was a superstition that Babur had woven in his mind based on traditions of astrology that prevailed in his vicinity. He has said, 'I now understand that these considerations are worth nothing and that our haste was without reason.'

With a high desire to fight, reinforced with omens of stars, Babur marched ahead with his soldiers as the dawn broke. They formed up in an array of right and left, centre and van. The right was led by Ibrahim Saru, Ibrahim Jani, Abu'l-Qasim Kohbur, and other major begs. The left was led by Muhammad Mazid Tarkhān, Ibrahim Tarkhān, other Samarkandi begs, Sulṭān Husain Arghun, Qara (Black) Barlas, Pir Ahmad and Khwaja Husain. Qasim Beg was along with Babur who was leading in the centre. This central band included several of Babur's close circle and household. The van had veterans like Qambar Ali, Banda Ali, Khwaja Ali, Mir Shah Quchim, Sayyid Qasim, Lord of the Gate—Banda Ali's younger brother Khaldar and Haidar-i-Qasim's son Quch. Together with all the good warriors and the rest of the household thus arrayed, they marched from the camp.

Meanwhile, Shaybāni Khān and his men marched out from his camp. His left band was led by Sulṭān Hamza, Sulṭān Mahdi and other important sulṭāns. The right band was led by Sulṭān Mahmud and other Timur Sulṭāns.

And then the two armies began to approach each other. Shaybāni wheeled his right towards Babur's men's rear side. Babur turned to match the blow. This brought repercussions. Babur's best braves and those inscribed in the Van lied to his right. This uncovered their front of the centre. Nonetheless, Babur's troops fought those attacked from the front, forcing them way back to their centre. Babur asserted that the setback was so harsh to the enemies' camp that one of the old chiefs told Shaybāni Khān, 'We must move off! It is past a stand.' However, Shaybāni did not bother to hear him and continued to give a great fight. Eventually, his right beat Babur's left and then he wheeled (again) to Babur's rear.
