That meeting had been a bit sour for Babur. The elder Khān simply gave away all the forts and places won by Babur to the younger Khān. According to Babur, he did spell out the reasons for doing so. In his opinion, it was done for an advantage. Babur was also told by the elder Khān that Shaybāni Khān had already taken Samarkand, and the younger Khān had no lands of his own and hence the lands under Andijān, on the south of the Khujand-water, must be given to him for encampment. The elder Khān promised to grant Babur the country under Akhsī, on the north of the Khujand-water. He also confirmed that after establishing a firm grip on Ferghana, they would also move to take Samarkand, and it would be given to Babur. The whole of the Ferghana country would then be controlled by the younger Khān.

Babur felt that these words were said to deceive him. Having seen their acts so far it was tough for Babur to believe how much they would stick to their words after having attained the objective. But at the same time, Babur had to agree for he had no other option.

After the interview with the elder Khān, Babur went ahead to meet the younger Khān. Qaṃbar-‘alī joined Babur on the way. He said, ‘Do you see? They have taken the whole of the country just become yours. There is no opening for you through them. You have in your hands, Osh, Marghīnān, Aūzkīnt, the cultivated land, the tribes, and the hordes. You go to Osh; make that fort fast; send a man to Taṃbal, make peace with him, then strike at the Moghūl and drive him out. After that, divide the districts into an elder and a younger brother’s share.’

Babur responded, ‘Would that be right? The Khāns are my blood relations; better serve them than rule for Taṃbal.’[*]

Seeing that his words could not leave an impression on Babur, Qaṃbar-‘alī turned away, disheartened by his own words. Babur then went on to see his younger Khān Dada.

At this very first audience, Babur had appeared unannounced and even the Khān had no time to dismount, hence it turned out to be rather unceremonious. This time, Babur got even nearer perhaps, but the Khān ran out as far as the end of the tent-ropes. Babur was finding it quite difficult to walk because of the wound in the leg. Finally, they met, and Babur greeted him as per the protocol. And then Khān said, ‘You have talked about as a hero, my young brother!’

He took Babur’s arm leading him into his tent. In general, the tents around had very small pitches but the one in which he lived had long
