Matters of Badakhshān

Nāṣir Mīrzā was still in the camp on the Bārān-water when he heard the news that the Badakhshīs had united against the Aūzbegs and had killed some of them. The event is explained by Babur:[†]

> When Shaybāni Khān had given Qūndūz to Qaṃbar Bī and gone himself to Khwārizm; Qaṃbar Bī, to conciliate the Badakhshīs, sent them a son of Muḥammad-i-makhdūmī, Maḥmūd by name, but Mubārak Shāh,—whose ancestors are heard of as begs of the Badakhshān Shāhs,—having uplifted his own head, and cut off Maḥmūd's and those of some Aūzbegs, made himself fast in the fort once known as Shāf-tiwār but re-named by him Qila'-i-ẓafar. Moreover, in Rustāq Muḥammad qūrchī, an armorer of Khusrau Shāh, then occupying Khamalangān, slew Shaibāq Khān's ṣadr and some Aūzbegs and made that place fast. Zubair of Rāgh, again, whose forefathers also will have been begs of the Badakhshān Shāhs, uprose in Rāgh. Jahāngīr Turkmān, again, a servant of Khusrau Shāh's Walī, collected some of the fugitive soldiers and tribesmen Walī had left behind, and with them withdrew into a fastness.

Nāṣir Mīrzā heard of these details and also got provoked by a few puerile, short-sighted persons. Intending to covet Badakhshān, he marched along the Shibr-tū and Āb-dara road. Babur drove the families of the men who had come into Kābul from the other side of the Amū like sheep.[4]

Khusrau Shāh's Death

When Khusrau Shāh and Aḥmad-i-qāsim were fleeing from Ājar for Khurāsāny,[5] they met Badī'u'z-zamān Mīrzā and Ẕū'n-nūn Beg, together in the presence of Sulṭān Ḥusayn Mīrzā in Herī. All had long been foes of Ḥusayn Mīrzā. They had caused him some discomfort. Perhaps, Ḥusayn Mīrzā too didn't harbour any soft corner for them either.

Despite this, they chose to discuss their distress with him. Babur came to know about the circumstances as all communication went through him. He had a feeling that they would have not gone to see him if he hadn't rendered Khusrau Shāh helpless. Not to forget, Babur had stripped him of his followers and had taken Kābul from Ẕū'n'nūn's son, Muqīm. Badī'u'z-zamān Mīrzā himself was like currency in the hands of the rest, who could do nothing beyond their words.

As their luck would have it, Sulṭān Ḥussayn Mīrzā displayed a courteous attitude towards each one of them. He even gave them good gifts.

Soon after they had arrived, Khusrau Shāh said, 'If I go, I shall get it all into my hands.' And he requested a leave. They finessed a little about his leave,