caused turbulence in the eyes of Babur and his well-wishers. Those people and hordes included the Turks, Moghūls, Afghāns and Hazāra. Apart from these troubles as seen by Babur's well-wishers, other hurdles like a mountain road full of snow would have made hard the seven-week-long journey. Hence one of Babur's well-wishers thoroughly opposed this proposal.

Eventually, Babur rejected the proposal but the more he insisted, the Mīrzās urged more. When nothing could be concluded, Badī'u'z-zamān Mīrzā, Abū'l-muḥsin Mīrzā and Muẓaffar Mīrzā came to see Babur in his tent itself. Babur, who respected them for their Timurid lineage, couldn't refuse at all. That apart, Babur also thought that in the whole of the world (as he knew), no town matched the splendour of Herī which had prospered under the rule of Sulṭān Husayn Mīrzā. He has mentioned the splendour to have grown by almost twenty times what it was before Sulṭān Husayn's rule. Babur consented to stay back.

On the other hand, Abū'l-muḥsin went back to Marv, Ibn-i-ḥusayn rode to Tūn, Badī'u'z-zamān and Muẓaffar set off for Herī. Babur followed the latter cruising on the road of Chihil-dukhtarān and Tāsh-rabāt.

Babur's paternal-aunt Pāyanda Sulṭān Begum, Khadīja Begum, Apāq Begum, daughters of Sulṭān Abū-sa'īd Mīrzā were gathered together waiting to see him at Sulṭān Ḥusayn Mīrzā's catacomb. As the custom and tradition wanted, Babur bent the knee to Pāyanda Sulṭān Begum. Next, he had an interview with Apāq Begum, but notably, he didn't bend his knee here.[20] Then he went to Khadīja Begum and bent the knee to her too.

He sat there during the reading of the Qur'ān. Babur along with other begums went to the southern college, where Khadīja Begum's tent was pitched. The eateries had been placed too. After having the food, Babur and others went to the tent of Pāyanda Sulṭān Begum and spent the night there.

Babur and other's camp was arranged in the New Year's Garden. He also spent the night at the camp, the after he visited the begums. But the place didn't give Babur the comfort as expected and after complaining he was assigned to stay in the residence of 'Alī-sher Beg. He stayed there for the complete stay of Herī. During the whole stay, he regularly took the audience of Badī'u'z-zamān Mīrzā at the beautiful New Year's Garden.

In a few days, Muẓaffar Mīrzā had got himself settled down in the white garden. He invited Babur to his quarter. Babur arrived with Jahāngīr Mīrzā.