So, it means that this donation sent out in AD 1576 to Hajj was equivalent to at least a salary of around six lakh people on an average. The population of India in that period was 1,35,000. This means that if each Indian earned Rs 4.88 every month—the sum would have been equal to what was invested for the Hajj of AD 1576.

Just the very next year another caravan left for Mecca with a bounty of Rs 5 lakh and Rs 1 lakh for the Sherif of Mecca who was known to be descendent of Prophet Muhammad's grandson Hasan ibn Ali. When these gigantic amounts came to Mecca, the Muslim world flocked over here desperately to claim whatever they could in name of alms.[*] [†]

The records do tell us that Akbar was trying hard to become the Caliph, a syndrome from which even Timur suffered. When things were not working just by wasting much Indian wealth over the Muslim world, in AD 1579, he insisted the Ulemas to sign a document to let him use the title 'Padshah-i Islam' and attempted to be presented as the Khalifa. He had begun to lead the Friday prayers, taking the precedents from the Abbassid rulers. But finally, in AD 1581–82, the Ottomans showed him a way out.[‡]Three years later, he established Din-E-Illahi. The aspiration to lead with religion was deeply embedded in the Tīmūrid psyche.
