Chapter 19: Hindustan Project Fails for the Second Time

1 Mihmān-beglār, was an expression first used by Babur in Baburnama, explaining this instance, which perhaps happened due, presumably, to accessions from Khusrau Shāh's following. A very similar case has been addressed in in Max Müller's Science of Language, Vol-1" (Müller, 1891) where he says, 'Turkman tribes are under the command of Aūzbeg Khans of Khiva, Ferghana & Bukhara. They call themselves, however, not subjects, but guests of these Khāns.' (Referred the note of Annette Susannah Beveridge for understanding of the translation) (Ghāzī, 1922)

2 Also known as Takht pass. This pass has been known from times immemorial.

3 This speaks of Babur's tyranny against anyone who in his eyes would offend Islam and great people of Islam.

4 Narrated in section 'Nāṣīr Mīrzā's Misconduct' that how they were thus driven on from the Bārān-water.

5 Discussed in section 'Walī, brother of Khusrau Shāh dies & Kābul is gained'.

6 Babur addresses him as 'your honour' in Baburnama, which means even this time he had great honorific regards for Khusrau Shāh irrespective of whatever both did to each other.

7 Explained in 'Qaṃbar-'alī dismissed' of the chapter 18.

8 Author's opinion: This incidence gives us an idea that the Timurid society too firmly believed in superiority by birth.

9 In AD 1504, Baqi had persuaded Babur to come to Kābul & not Khurāsān. The same year he had also dictated the march to Kohāt, and the rest of that disastrous travel.

10 As per the notes of Annette Susannah Beveridge, probably this word is an equivalent of Persian goshī which was a tax on cattle and beasts of burden.

11 He uses the number 'nine' perhaps for the mystic value attached to it. For example, the Tarkhans had 'nine' privileges.

12 Nothing much is found about Bārān. As per the note 973 of Annette Susannah Beveridge it can be identified as the village marked Baian on the French Map.
