For the Hazāra (Turkī, Mīng) on the Mīrzā's road see Raverty's routes from Ghaznī to the north. An account given by the Tārīkh-i-rashīdī (p. 196) of Jahāngīr's doings is confused; its parenthetical '(at the same time)' can hardly be correct. Jahāngīr left Ghaznī now, (911 ah.), as Bābur left Kābul in 912 ah. without knowledge of Ḥusain's death (911 ah.). Bābur had heard it (f. 183b) before Jahāngīr joined him (912 ah.); after their meeting they went on together to Herī. The petition of which the T. R. speaks as made by Jahāngīr to Bābur, that he might go into Khurāsān and help the Bāī-qarā Mīrzās must have been made after the meeting of the two at Ṣaf-hill (f. 184b).

14 Chīn Ṣūfī was loyal to Ḥusayn Mīrzā.

15 As per the note 981 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, Bābā Ilāhī may be the "Baboulei" of the French Map of 1904, on the Herī-Kushk-Marūchāq road.

16 The news of Sultan Husayn's death had yet not reached to Babur.

17 According to the note 1179 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, 'Murgh-āb is supposed to be the fortified place at the crossing of the river by the main North-Eastern Road. Khwānd-amīr had recorded that the information of his approach was hailed in the Mīrzās' camp as good news.'

18 According to the note 1183 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, it was perhaps it a recess, resembling a gateway. According to her, the impression conveyed by Bābur's words here would be to the artist who in B.M. Or. 3714, has depicted the scene, is that there was a vestibule opening into the tent by a door and that the Mīrzā sat near that door. It must be said however that the illustration does not closely follow the text, in some known details.

19 Balkh is a town in the Balkh Province of Afghanistan. It is situated around twelve miles north-west of the provincial capital Mazar-e Sharif. Amu Darya and the Uzbekistan border lies forty-six miles from Balkh.

Historically, the ancient land of Balkh had Hindu, Buddhist and Parsi inhabitants. It was one of the wealthiest and largest cities of Khorasan. The Persians (the Parsus of Rigveda) called the city s Zariaspa. The ancient Greeks (Dhruyus of Rigveda are their ancestors) called the city of Balkh as Bactra, giving its name to Bactria (Greeks called the city also Zariaspa).

20 According to the note 1187 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, following is mentioned with respect to the reason of Babur not kneeling:

Unless all copies I have seen reproduce a primary clerical mistake of Bābur's, the change of salutation indicated by there being no kneeling with Apāq Begīm, points to a nuance of etiquette. Of the verb yūkūnmāk it may be noted that it both describes the ceremonious attitude of intercourse, i.e., kneeling and sitting back on both heels (Shaw), and the kneeling on meeting. From Bābur's phrase Begīm bīla yūkūnūb [having kneeled with], it appears that each of those meeting made the genuflection; I have not found the phrase used of other meetings; it is not the one used when a junior or a man of less degree meets a senior or superior in rank (e.g. Khusrau and Bābur f. 123, or Bābur and Badī'u'z-zamān f. 186).
