21 These are windows or balconies from which a ruler appears to the common people.

22 Annette Susannah Beveridge mentioned in her note 1195, for it probably being a gold embroidered garment.

23 As per the note 1217 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, it is the almshouse or convent founded during the Tīmūr's reign.

24 Gharchistan or Gharjistan is also known as Gharj Al-Shar. It was a medieval region on the north bank of the Murghab River, lying to the east of Herat and north of Hari River. It corresponds roughly to the modern Badghis Province of Afghanistan.

25According to the note 1219 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, this name may be due to the splashing of water. A Langar which may be that of Mīr Ghiyāṣ, is shown in maps in the Bām valley; from it into the Herī-rūd valley Babur's route may well have been the track from that Langar which, passing the villages on the southern border of Gharjistān, goes to Ahangarān.

26 The right and wrong roads are shown by the maps of British India Survey and the French Military. The right road turns off from the wrong one, at Daulat-yār, to the right, and mounts diagonally along the south rampart of the Herī-rūd valley, to the Zirrīn-pass, which lies above the Bakkak-pass and carries the regular road for Yaka-aūlāng. It must be said, however, that we are not told whether Yaka-aūlāng was Qāsim Beg's objective; the direct road for Kābul from the Herī-rūd valley is not over the Zirrīn-pass but goes from Daulat-yār by "Āq-zarat", and the southern flank of Koh-i-bābā (bābār) to the Unai-pass (Holdich, 1910 p. 262).

27 According to the note 1223 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, the Hazāras appeared to have been wintering outside their own valley, on the Ghūr-bund road, in wait for travellers. They had been perennial highwaymen on the only pass to the north not closed entirely in winter.

28 According to the note 1233 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, this prayer is composed of extracts from the Qurān. She has represented as it stands in Mr. Erskine's wording (p. 216)

29 Babur always seems to have soft corner for the people who he held as own in some part of life.

30 As per the note 1236 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, they were ashamed for now putting a Tīmūrid in Babur's place in Kābul; viz. that he was believed captive in Herī and that Mīrzā Khān was an effective locum tenens against the Arghūns. Haidar sets down what in his eyes pleaded excuse for his father Muhammad Ḥusain.
