31 Sons of Sultan Aḥmad Khān Chaghatāī.

32 As per the note 1243 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, Bārān seems likely to be the Baian of some maps. Gul-i-bahār is higher up on the Panjhīr road. Chāsh-tūpa will have been near-by; its name might mean Hill of the heap of winnowed-corn.

33 Following up the whole journey of Babur and finally reaching by this node, I could assume that he displayed bipolar traits.

34 At the ruler's disposition was manifestly taken the Fifth. It is observed that at least in two places dependents send gifts to Babur and the word used is tassaduq, which might be rendered as 'gifts for the poor'. This perhaps means that the Padishah did receive these in the place of the Imām of the Qurān's law (8.41) which asks one-fifth of spoil to be given to the Imām for the poor, orphans, and travellers.

35 According to the Islamic Law, a term is fixed after widowhood or divorce within which re-marriage becomes illicit. According to the note 1272 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, on coming into Herī on Moharram 11th, Shaybāni at once set about gathering in the property of the Tīmūrids. He had the wives and daughters of the former rulers brought before him. The great lady Khānzāda Begum who was daughter of Aḥmad Khān, niece of Sultan Ḥussayn Mīrzā, and wife of Muẓaffar Mīrzā, showed herself pleased in his presence. Desiring to marry him, she said Muẓaffar Mīrzā had divorced her two years before. Trustworthy persons gave evidence to the same effect, so she was united to Shaybāni in accordance with the glorious Law. Mihr-angez Begum, Muẓaffar Mirza's daughter, was married to 'Ubaidu'llāh Sultan (Aūzbeg); the rest of the chaste ladies having been sent back into the city, Shaybāni resumed his search for property.' Manifestly, Babur did not believe in the divorce Khwānd-amīr thus records.

36 As per the note 1280 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, Jahāngīr's son, thus brought by his mother, will have been an infant; his father had gone back last year with Babur by the mountain road and had been left, sick and travelling in a litter, with the baggage when Bābur hurried on to Kābul at the news of the mutiny against him (Baburnama, folio 197); he must have died shortly afterwards, seemingly between the departure of the two rebels from Kābul (Baburnama, folio 201b-202) and the march out for Kandahār. Doubtless his widow now brought her child to claim his uncle Babur's protection.

37 As per the note 1281 of Annette Susannah Beveridge, Persians pay great attention in their correspondence not only to the style but to the kind of paper on which a letter is written, the place of signature, the place of the seal, and the situation of the address. Chardin gives some curious information on the
