than Babur.
- Shahr Banu Begum was the third daughter and sibling of Nasir Mīrzā. She was eight years younger than Babur.
- Yadgar Sulṭān Begum was the fourth daughter of Umar Shaikh, and she was born to a concubine, Agha Sulṭān. She was eleven years younger than Babur.
- Ruqaiya Sulṭān Begum was the fifth daughter and was born to Makhdum Sulṭān Begum. Makhdum was known for her dark and deep eyes and was accordingly called ‘begum with dark eyes’.

The last two were born after Umar’s death. Babur has not given any records of their name in the Baburnama.

Yadgar Sulṭān Begum was raised by Babur’s maternal grandmother Aisan Daulat Begum. Shaybāni Khān had attacked and taken Andijān and Akhshi from Babur. During this struggle, Yadgar fell prey to Sulṭān Abdul Latif’s lust and was taken away as a spoil of war. Later during the battle of Ab Darrah Pass in AD 1511, Babur defeated Sulṭān Hamza and other sulṭāns who were his allies. He got his sister back and reclaimed Ḥisār. During Babur’s throneless period, Ruqaiya Sulṭān Begum was taken by Sulṭān Jani Beg. She gave birth to two children, but they did not survive. It is said that she lost her life in despair. It was sometime in the period between Babur losing Ferghana to gaining Kābul.

Babur’s Mother’s Family

Yunus Khān descended from Chagatai Khān, the second son of Genghis Khān. He was fathered by Sulṭān Vais Khān. Following is the family progression:[*]

1. Genghis Khān
2. Chagatai Khān, Khān of the Chagatai Khānate, AD 1226–1242
3. Mutu Khān
4. Yesünto’a
5. Baraq Khān, Khān of the Chagatai Khānate, AD 1266–1270
6. Du’a, Khān of the Chagatai Khānate, AD 1282–1307
7. Esen Buqa I, Khān of the Chagatai Khānate, AD 1310–1318 (First Khān to convert to Islam)