conquest. His hands were too good at Nastaʻlīq. He was quite a flatterer to his masters and very avarice.

Qambar-ʻAli Mughul of the Akhtachi was another Amir of a family full of varying characters. He was popularly called ‘Skinner’. because when his father came to Ferghana, he worked as a skinner. He was Yunus Khān’s water bottle bearer in the initial days, though later became a beg. The records state that till he did not become a beg, he was a smart man but later turned out to be slack. He used to talk a lot but most of it was empty.