Hostilities seemed inevitable for Babur after his orders. The Moghūls rose and brought in consternation and fear for Babur's reign ahead. They marched through Rabatik Aurchini, that is, Aiki-su-Arasi, to capture Auzkint. They had sent a man to Tambal for building support.

Babur feared something disastrous could occur as Moghūl hordes formed a large part of his reign. In terms of numbers, Babur's mother had around 2000 Moghūls. Recently, more Moghūls had come from Hisar with Hamza Sulṭān, Mahdi Sulṭān and Muhammad Dughlat Hisari. Babur clearly states in the Baburnama that Moghūls were known for bringing mischief and devastation. Till then, Moghūls had revolted five times against Babur.

Babur goes on to mention that Moghūls not only rebelled against him, but it was quite regular and natural for them to take on their Khāns too.

Sulṭān Quli Chilnaq brought the news of the revolt to Babur. Years back, Babur had favoured his father Khudai Birdi Buqaq. He was from the horde of the Moghūls who had rebelled, and leaving them behind along with his family, he brought the news to Babur. Babur has mentioned that one of Khudai Birdi Buqaq's shameful acts undid hundreds of his good things. Babur has also said that the shameful act was nothing but the by-product of a Moghūl trait.

As the news of the rebellion reached Babur, the begs gathered for counsel reaching out to him. Babur himself wanted to lead the campaign of crushing the revolt but the council suggested as below:[*]

> This is a trifling matter; what need for the Padishah to ride out? Let Qasim Beg go with the begs and men assembled here.

Although things happened as suggested by the council, he still feared an error of judgement.

Babur was anxious as Qasim Beg led his force out that same day. Babur was aware that Tambal in the meantime must have joined the rebelling Moghūls.

Babur's men led by Qasim crossed the Kara River early the next morning and stood face-to-face with rebels. A massive fight took place. Qasim Beg chopped Muhammad Arghun's head, but victory was not to kiss their fate. Babur stood vindicated owing to an error in judgement.

Qasim Beg, Ali Dost Taghai, Ibrahim Saru, Wais Laghari, Sayyidi Qara, and three or four more of Babur's begs and household got away but the rest
