fell into the hands of the rebels. Amongst those caught were Ali Darwesh Beg, Mirim Laghart, Taghai Beg's son Tuqa and Ali dost's son, Muhammad Dost, Mir Shah Quchin, and Mirim Diwan.

Babur has talked about the big fight between two soldiers, Samad, Ibrahim Saru's younger brother on Babur's side and Shah Suwar, a Hisari Moghūl from the rebel's side.

Babur found this defeat against the rebellion Moghūls unusual and unexpected given the fact that he had just regained his country, Ferghana. At this defeat, Babur recalled his great support Qambar Ali, who was a Moghūl too and had gone home after Babur had regained Andijān.

Tambal Troubles

Tambal's hopes had renewed with the rising Moghūl rebellions. Tambal got Jahangir Mīrzā with him and dismounted two miles east before Andijān in the meadow lying in front of the hill of Aish. Tambal attempted to pick a battle against Babur twice only to be devastated each time. Frustrated, Tambal killed two of Babur's begs, Mirim Laghari and Tuqa Beg, whom he had captured. He lay around there for around a month and then finally turned towards Osh. Babur had placed Ibrahim Saru, who, he believed, would defend the place well.