order him to apologize to the Unions. Talwar did not change his stand and his superior did not ask him to apologize. In the end the Union could do nothing and the crowd dispersed after a few hours.[21]

Talwar also narrates another incident which took place after he had become the Chairman. He was in Calcutta to attend a Board meeting when word was received that one of the unrecognized unions was planning to prevent Talwar from leaving the premises after the meeting if their demands were not met. Talwar rejected the suggestion to finish the meeting early. When the meeting was over and he and the Secretary and Treasurer, P.C.D. Nambiar, came out to the main road, they were gheraoed by slogan-shouting members of the unrecognized unions. Both were manhandled and the President of the unrecognized union asked Talwar, as the Chairman, to intervene and concede to certain demands Nambiar had not agreed to. Talwar said that since such demands came within Nambiar's competence and authority he saw no justification to interfere. Despite repeated demands he held firm and more importantly kept his cool. The gherao continued for three hours after which the staff started dispersing.[22]

Another anecdote also pertains to an unrecognized union. The Bank of Behar, a scheduled bank with twenty-eight branches, had run into financial difficulties and it was amalgamated with the SBI on instructions from the government in November 1969. After the merger of the Patna Branch of the Bank of Behar with the Patna Branch of the SBI, the Bank of Behar staff union in the branch ceased to be a recognized union for the bank. The Bank of Behar staff union was known to make trouble and on one occasion it was serious enough for the clearing house at Patna (which was being conducted by the SBI) to remain closed for a long time.

The stalemate continued for some time and attracted the attention of Finance Minister Y.B. Chavan who wanted an early resolution of the matter. The RBI Governor was asked to speak to Talwar about it. Talwar advised the Governor that it was the policy to deal only with recognized unions. Any dealing with an unrecognized union would elicit an immediate response from the recognized union and matters could become worse. But the Governor told him that the Finance Minister wanted clearing to be resumed with immediate effect and that he would have to carry out his instructions. Talwar explained his inability to do so for reasons he had already made clear to the RBI Governor.
