5, 1953, and headed by Shroff, comprised the personnel proposed by the Governor and Deshmukh.[2] Apart from Joshi, the other members of the Committee were S. Anantharamakrishnan, a Madras industrialist and a member of the Bank's Local Board at Madras; C.W. Middleton, Secretary and Treasurer of the Imperial Bank of India; V.R. Sonalkar, Managing Director of the IFCI; and B.T. Thakur and B.K. Dutt, General Managers respectively of the United Commercial Bank and the United Bank of India. M.S. Nadkarni and K.S. Krishnaswamy of the RBI functioned jointly as Secretaries of the Committee.

THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE FOR THE PRIVATE SECTOR

The principal method of inquiry adopted by the Shroff Committee was that of holding discussions with government, industry, the banking and insurance sectors, and agents involved with the capital market. After its first meeting held in Bombay on October 30, 1953, the Committee reassembled in New Delhi from November 25 to December 1, 1953, where it held discussions with the Planning Commission, representatives of certain ministries, the IFCI, prominent local bankers, industrialists, and economists. The Committee later held its sittings in Calcutta from 15 to 21 December where a series of meetings took place with local industrialists, bankers, chambers of commerce, and associations of tea, jute, coal, and sugar industries. The next series of meetings took place in Bombay in January 1954, when it met the representatives of banking, industry, insurance, and other interests. The Committee also visited Bangalore and Madras. It assembled for the last time in Bombay from April 12 to April 23, 1954, to finalize its report.

The Committee received over seventy memoranda and notes. Since it was made out that banking development was being retarded by the absence of adequate remittance facilities and the steep rise in operating costs arising from wage awards of industrial tribunals, the Shroff Committee appointed two sub-committees to look into these aspects. After considering all the evidence before it, the Shroff Committee submitted its report in April 1954, a few months before the completion of the report of the AIRCS. The report carried the stamp of Shroff's frank opinions but in keeping with the
