Bombay, 1981, p. 14.

4 He resigned in 1922 after contributing significantly to the progress of the bank. He continued in an advisory capacity for several years and the spirit of Stringfellow continues in the bank to this day. The Bank of India's telegraphic address 'stringent' is derived from his name and the telegraphic address of its corporate headquarters is 'centstring.'

5 N.J. Nanporia Op.Cit., p. 19.

6 Amiya Kumar Bagchi, The Evolution of the State Bank of India: The Era of the Presidency Banks, 1876–1920, Vol.2, Sage Publications India Pvt. Ltd, New Delhi, 1997, p. 484.

7 N.J. Nanporia, Op. Cit., p. 21.

8 All except the last named were later knighted.

9 H.T. Parekh's two brothers also served the Central Bank throughout their lives with the elder brother Shantilal, Deepak's father, rising to become Deputy General Manager. Shantilal joined the Mandvi branch of the bank on a salary of ₹50. He was the Chief Accountant at the branch in Rangoon and was one of the last people to leave Burma during the Second World War. Deepak recalls that his father travelled by train, bus, bullock cart, and undertook a long and arduous trek on foot through jungles to reach an Indian town. He sent a telegram and a photograph of himself to his family. This photograph of a tired and unshaven man remains a prized possession even now. When the banks were nationalized in Burma in 1963, the Central Bank lost its Rangoon branch. H.T. Parekh served as Sorabji's secretary in London for a month in 1936.

10 N.J. Nanporia, Op.Cit., p. 51.

11 The Godrejs' were keen to develop Indian industries in their pursuit of selfreliance but the British dominated foreign banks were not interested in financing them. Pirojshah Godrej approached the Central Bank of India and received his first major loan of ₹30,000 in 1932. Godrej went on to become the largest account holder of the Central Bank of India.

12 S.K. Muranjan, Modern Banking in India, Hind Kitabs Ltd, Bombay, 1948, p. 227.