during a morning walk and a few days later F.E. Dinshaw told Purshotamdas that it was to be let. Purshotamdas first became a tenant and then two years later in 1931 bought the house (for ₹3 lakhs) from J.R.D. who needed the money to pay off his father's debts. (R.D. Tata while careful with Tatas' money seems to have been careless with his own. When he died in 1926, he owed money to both Tata Sons and Sir Dorabji Tata. On his death Tata Sons wrote off the loan in view of his services to the firm, but Sir Dorabji insisted that his personal loan be repaid.)
