13 The scheme based on the Electoral College principle came to be known as Stockholders' Scheme. Under this, Government of India 5 percent Reserve Bank stock was to be issued at par in amounts of ₹100 and multiples thereof. The maximum holding was limited to ₹10,000 and every holder had one vote and had to be either domiciled or ordinarily resident in India. A register of stockholders was to be kept in each of the major Provinces, and where there were at least 1,000 stockholders on the register, they were to be allowed to elect, triennially sixty trustees who were to elect ten Directors on the bank's Board.
