Burma was a prosperous province at the time and the bank subscribed to loans raised by the government. It subscribed to loans raised by bodies such as the Rangoon Municipal Corporation and the Rangoon Port Trust, and was responsible for promoting these securities in the Bombay and Calcutta markets.